The Voice of Experience

WE WOULD HAVE done well, and we would still to well, to heed the words of a serious Catholic on the ground in Iraq, who perhaps attempted to send the “west” a warning about continuing in its murderous policy. Muslims are entitled to natural justice, it would seem, no matter who their leader is or what the New World Order thinks of him.

“BAGHDAD, Mar. 2, 2001 (FIDES/CWNews.com) – In a provocative interview with the FIDES news service, the spiritual leader of Iraq’s Catholic population warned that the United States and Great Britain are risking a new outbreak of violence in the Middle East by continuing harsh sanctions on Iraq.

“Patriarch Raphael I Bidawid, the head of the Chaldean Catholic Church, spoke to Fides shortly after bombing raids on February 16 and 22. These most recent raids caused 2 deaths and injured 20 people. In the past 3 years, 323 people have been reportedly killed, and thousands injured, in air strikes by American and British planes enforcing a ‘no-fly zone’ in Iraqi air space – a policy set by those two countries without any UN mandate.

“Religious leaders in Iraq have frequently complained that international sanctions on their country – set in place to punish the regime of Saddam Hussein – have in effect punished ordinary citizens, causing widespread poverty and hunger. The Vatican, too, has repeatedly criticized the sanctions.

“The vast majority of Iraq’s 20 million people are Muslim, but there are approximately 1 million Christians. Of these, roughly 80 percent are members of the Eastern-rite Chaldean Catholic Church.

“The following is the text of the FIDES interview with the Chaldean Patriarch:

FIDES: Your Beatitude, what is your reaction to the recent bombings in northern Iraq?

P A T R I A R C H R A P H A E L I B I D A W I D: I have no words with which to condemn this use of force against the weak. During the Second World War the allies accused the Nazis of using the right of force. Now the US and Britain are using force against the people of Iraq. They proclaim principles of humanity and human rights, but where do they apply them? They must realize that we Iraqis too have the right to life and dignity.

The Vatican, France, Italy and Russia have condemned the use of force and we – the Church of Baghdad – do the same.

FIDES: The American Secretary of State is visiting Israel; Bush and Blair will meet at Camp David. What is your forecast for the Middle East?

PATRIARCH: I am afraid that if the USA and Britain continue this way, the whole of the Middle East will be set on fire. This escalation of violence on the part of USA and Britain can push Iraq to retaliate out of desperation. The whole of the Arab world is now against the Americans and the British, and ready to commit violence against the USA and Britain in their own countries... The more Saddam is maltreated, the more he is applauded... think of the common good which peace can give to all, us and you. If we do not resume dialogue the ghost of a war is not improbable and we risk new chaos."

It seems that in the case of the Patriarch, his religious sense enhanced and confirmed his common sense. For many of us, our desire for a clean fight – one between the "good guys" who represent everything comfortable, flashy, and exciting about the modern world, and the "bad guys" who simply fail to "modernize" and obviously resent us for our industrial, financial, and political strength – obscures our vision of the true struggle that lies ahead. It is indeed a struggle against "evildoers," but the evil of bin Laden is a side note to a much larger, more powerful, and better-entrenched evil.

It is a struggle of liberation from the tyranny of immorality, the tyranny of capital, corporate industrialism, and materialism, and the ultimate tyranny of mindless pluralism which succeeds only in suppressing the Truth and in speeding us on our way to "a universal Brotherhood of nations – a greater Judaism in fact – [in which] all the separate races and religions shall disappear."

The race-less, religion-less, value-less, and truth-less universal brotherhood has marshaled all the PR forces at its command to defend itself, and to turn a brief (intentional?) financial setback into unrestricted triumph. "This is a Religious War," screams Andrew

Sullivan in the headline to his October 7th article for the New York Times Magazine. The subtitle gives us an all-too-clear indication of just what he means: "The Osama bin Ladens of the world – like the leaders of the Inquisition and others before and after them – demand that all embrace absolute faith. Individual faith and pluralism were the targets Sept. 11, and it was only the beginning of an epic battle."

God grant that this pluralism may be defeated – a pluralism which is a poor disguise for the triumph of Judeo-Masonic will – and that the clear light of the Faith may shine brightly. But that won't happen unless we put ourselves, and others, on guard – on guard against insidious attempt to dismiss and distort the truth in the wake of the chaos of 9-11; on guard against attempt to turn the WTC and the Pentagon into icons of "individual faith" and "freedom;" and on guard against the attempt to turn opposition to bin Laden into a vindication and defense of the west's public, institutional apostasy.

- * Israel once issued a commemorative postage stamp featuring a man who attacked a civilian bus and killed several people?
- * recently declassified documents indicate that Israel's first PM, David Ben-Gurion, approved of Palestinian expulsion in at least some instances in 1948?
- * despite a "ban" on torture by Israel's High Court of Justice, Israel's "Shin Bet" interrogators have continued to torture Palestinian prisoners?
